Coalition Against Trafficking Exploitation (CATE)

CATE is a united community movement to prevent and respond to human trafficking and exploitation.

CATE exists to:

- Improve the quality and quantity of survivor-centered, trauma-informed, and evidence-based services available to survivors.
- Improve coordination of service providers, governmental entities, and community members to reduce barriers and gaps in resources for survivors
- Raise awareness of the prevalence of human trafficking and services across Missouri
- Raise awareness of human trafficking in Missouri by collection and dissemination of data and research
- Influence systems-level community advocacy and policy

Project Overview

CATE and Missouri Foundation for Health (MFH) have partnered to release findings from the 2019 “Human Trafficking in Missouri and Metro East St. Louis: Provider Based Needs Assessment and Demographic Snapshot” and “State of Missouri & Metro East Anti-Trafficking Strategic Plan” conducted by Andrea Nichols, Ph.D. St. Louis Community College and Kathleen Preble, Ph.D. University of Missouri - Columbia. The research and subsequent reports are the results of a collaborative effort of Missouri Collaborative Against Human Trafficking (MCAHT), MFH, and service providers across social, legal, and healthcare sectors in the state of Missouri.

The purpose of the research is to identify demographics and needs of survivors, availability of resources and to establish a strategic plan to address gaps across Missouri. The research emphasizes how long-term abuse and exploitation leads to complex needs often beyond the scope of current resources, leaving survivors without resources necessary to heal.

During phase one of the research project, the authors and assistants created a comprehensive Missouri Resource Guide that identifies available resources across the state. In 2021, CATE in partnership with the research authors and MU Center for Applied Research and Engagement Systems (CARES) created a live, interactive version of the Missouri Resource Guide that is located on CATE’s website at www.mocate.org/mrg.

Project Limitations: Research findings were initially completed in late 2019. CATE’s release of this data was significantly delayed due to the impact of the Coronavirus Pandemic. It is difficult to determine how the pandemic has changed the landscape of Missouri social services since the initial data collection. CATE is addressing this limitation by collaborating with the researchers to implement routine reporting systems and protocols for coalition members to replicate this research in the future

Research Dissemination Introduction

This Research Media Toolkit is designed for individuals, community members, and organizations to raise awareness of human trafficking and to address the urgent needs of survivors in the state of Missouri. The attached materials were developed using data from “The Human Trafficking in Missouri and Metro East St. Louis: Provider Based Needs Assessment and Demographic Snapshot” by Andrea Nichols and Kathleen Preble. Both are university professors working and researching in Missouri for years.

You are free to modify these materials as needed in your dissemination efforts. We only ask that you refer to CATE’s Standards of Care for guidance on survivor-centric, culturally appropriate language when communicating about human trafficking through training and digital media, for example:

- Avoid using graphic images for shock value that further exploits survivors or sensationalize trafficking
- Focus on using images that display the diversity of human trafficking survivors and images that show dignity and respect for survivors

We hope you will utilize this toolkit to reach out to decision-makers, community members, and public or private funding sources to address the urgent needs of human trafficking survivors in the state of Missouri.

If you would like help with distributing these materials, please contact organizer@mocate.org

The Many Uses of This Toolkit

Please review the entire zip folder before getting started

Share The Infographics

- Print the infographics and share within your agency or at your next community event, meeting, or workshop
- Send a newsletter sharing the infographic and a blurb about the research
- Create a blog post sharing the infographic on your website

Share Data on Your Social Media

- Raise awareness of human trafficking and survivors needs by sharing social media graphics and captions we have created
- Follow CATE on Facebook, Instagram, & LinkedIn – be sure to tag CATE in your posts!
- Add www.mocate.org to your bio on Instagram
- Boost your post by adding hashtags #humantrafficking #traffickingsurvivors #antitrafficking #SoutheastMO #supportsurvivors #endtrafficking

The Coalition for Trafficking and Exploitation (CATE) and Missouri Foundation for Health have published findings from the 2019 “Human Trafficking in Missouri and Metro East St. Louis: Provider Based Needs Assessment and Demographic Snapshot,” and summarized the results with these infographics that include data from our community. This resource sheds light on the top needs of human trafficking survivors and what it means for strengthening services in our region. Every day, we see that long-term abuse and exploitation leads to complex needs often beyond the scope of current resources, leaving survivors without resources necessary to heal. We hope this information serves as a call to action for long-term support and investment in our community services. We encourage you to share this resource to educate and energize our community on the urgent needs of survivors in the Southeast area.

SUBJECT: Prioritize the urgent needs of survivors of human trafficking.

Dear [Insert Name],

The Coalition Against Trafficking and Exploitation and Missouri Foundation for Health released the findings from the “Human Trafficking in Missouri and Metro East St. Louis: Provider Based Needs Assessment and Demographic Snapshot”. The report is the result of a collaborative effort of research partners who surveyed service providers who work directly with survivors of human trafficking across social, legal, and healthcare service sectors in the state of Missouri. The research provides crucial insights into human trafficking that’s happening in our state and supports what those serving survivors already know – that long-term abuse and exploitation lead to complex needs often beyond the scope of current resources, leaving survivors without the resources necessary to heal.

The current snapshot of the needs and recommendations unique to the Southeast area include lack of access to shelter, mental health care, and substance use treatment. This data was gathered directly from service organizations in your district. I’m sharing this research to encourage you to prioritize survivor-centric policies and invest in social services that provide long-term, coordinated care to support trauma recovery and increase the overall health and wellness of survivors of human trafficking in Missouri. Together, we can support survivors and address human trafficking that is occurring right here in Southeast Missouri.

Sincerely,

Post 2: Survivor Demographics

See attached image file – “Post 2 Survivor Demographics” and add the following caption to your post:

Caption IG: Did you know that of the 24 survivors identified in Southeast Missouri during 2019, 29.2% were white, 29.2% were Black, and 25% were multiracial? Despite being a predominantly white area, trafficking disproportionately affects the non-white population of Southeast Missouri. Post 4: Key Implications

See attached image file – “Post 4 Key Implications” and add the following caption to your post:

Caption IG: While there are enough services to meet the general needs of most survivors in Southeast Missouri, those services rarely extend to the rural areas of the region and are often duplicate services competing for funding. CATE’s co-researchers recommend reducing the number of duplicate services, decreasing competition over funding, and extending services into rural areas through telehealth services.
